Why Study This Course?

A desire to learn about plays and their performance is required, together with an interest in all aspects of Drama and Theatre. The course also requires the will and ability to work unsupervised, both as an individual and part of the group, for the practical element. Involvement in and/or experience of theatre or theatre groups would be a great advantage. As part of the course, students will be required to make as many theatre visits as possible, both through the school and through their own efforts and they must be prepared to give up a proportion of time outside school hours when a performance/examination is being rehearsed. An understanding of the responsibility of the individual to the group is essential.

Course Content

Unit I - Devising	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The creation of an original piece of theatre in the light of a recognised theatre practitioner. • This Unit requires students to work cooperatively to create an original piece of theatre based on an extract from an existing play. • Students are required to perform in front of an audience and to submit a portfolio supporting their work.
Unit II - Text in Performance	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Performance of a set play • Performance of either a monologue or a duologue • This Unit is assessed practically by an external examiner. Students are required to either act in or technically support the performance of a published play and also perform either a monologue or duologue to the visiting examiner.
Unit III - Theatre Makers in Practice - written exam	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Live Theatre Evaluation • Realising a Performance Text • Interpreting a Performance Text • This Unit represents the greatest change from the existing course as the written exam involves a greater number of elements, including some unseen script work which requires the student to describe how they would adapt the work for performance.

It must be recognised that A-Level Drama and Theatre is a highly academic subject which requires rigorous theoretical and written work from its students.
